Report
Group 2

January 2020

Abstract

Report text

Contents

1   Introduction

The purpose of this project has been to develop a chat application that allows its users to automate in- and outbound messages through scripts written in the service oriented programming language, Jolie.

The underlying infrastructure of the application itself has been built as a micro-service architecture with the goal of affording greater atonomy and agility for developers working on focused aspects of the application.

2   Preliminaries

3   Technical Description

4   Related Work and Discussion

5   References